DRAFT

23 November 1962

The Committee on Overhead Reconnaissance played 4 principal roles in connection with overflight photography of Cuba:

- a. The preparation of the justification for obtaining political approval for overflight including judgment on the determination of frequency with which targets needed to be covered.
- b. The selection of specific targets for operational planning.
- c. The determination of the specific information for the guidance of the photography interpreters in preparing the preliminary report.
- d. Security control of the product.

(This last point is not germane to this paper, however, it may be worth commenting that no security problem arose with regard to these operations as a result of security handling of the product.)
